

Important Groups and Resources

Editorial statement

What's up: what has Humboldt Grassroots been up to? Fkly, because the regional assembly was a disappointment. We had expectations of friends from many groups part of the Anarchist movement locally connecting and working together on the common project of building a popular anarchism that would benefit all respective groups individuals and causes.

Like our proposal of dues to make it possible to have into shop or free school plus get the paper to have regular distribution. This proposal among others may have been appropriate had we talked with all the participants extensively before having the agenda finalized and the assembly go forward. As is always we must remember that regular communication is important when we are trying to start a project of that scale.

As per usual many comrades would have liked to be there (those busy revolutionary ninjas), and our lack of advertising publicly could be to blame for that. Clarity which is our primary aim in connecting with the community was set aside for our sense of immediacy, in hindsight, the results were predictable. We aimed at building on our success with the two book fairs and issues of the newspaper but we didn't use any of the same strategies that made those projects a success. Kernaly being publicly open when ever possible, keeping a sense of humor, and resisting the impulse to create an exclusive club and open lines of regular communication to make sure organizers and potential participants are on the same page, and make responsibilities accessible to anyone who wants them.

Life, it F#$%ing happens, between the BP oil spill and personal/political) stuff, and archibes people said they would writia but couldn't get together. You better believe that unemployment makes spending a lot of time writing an in-depth article about art and graffiti and its significance for social movements, really hard [making rent seems more pressing some how].

In spite of all that we have been getting a lot done. Learning about our strengths and how anarchy is already possible, our role is to help everyone realize their own potential and build strong relationships that make it happen. We have hosted a few benefit shows and film screenings distributing pamphlets (anti-racism, IWW pamphlets, Anarchist pamphlets a bunch of other stuff) by the hundreds and producing one of our own now available on our website which is now "almost fully operational".
